NAPLES, March 15.

TO such a pitch are the Algerines arrived, that if some effectual means are not speedily adopted to crush the depredations of those fearless marauders, trade in the Mediterranean will in a great measure be cut up, as those lawless barbarians are become very formidable in those seas, and exceeding numerous; they capture ships of almost every nation except the English, to whom they are extremely partial. Several vessels have lately suffered by these freebooters within sight of their own ports, and their crews dragged into slavery.

VIENNA, March 29.

We learn from Constantinople, that the Russian Minister, in consequence of despatches received from Kiow, in answer to those which he sent to inform the Empress both of the negative given by the Porte to her demands, and the consequent vigorous resolutions of the Divan, had presented a memorial to the Ottoman ministry, notifying, that neither their negative nor their warlike preparations could in the least intimidate the Empress; that her Majesty would never desist from her demands, but was resolved to support them with all her force.

WARSAW, April 21.

The last letters from the Ukraine advise, that several bodies of Ottoman troops are on the march to reenforce the garrisons of Chozim, Oczakow, Troika, and the Mohilla.

GENOA, April 9.

The Magistrate of Health here, has received authentic advice of the plague raging at Algiers, and that about sixty persons die there daily.

HAMBURGH, April 10.

Last week the Commander of an American ship took on board 40 young women, selected from those confined in the House of Correction, in order to transport them to Philadelphia. Upon the rumour of this embarkation, several other young women of the same calling with the above, though not under confinement, offered to undertake the voyage, with a view of gaining a settlement in the above district, where females are said to be wanting.

LONDON, April 19.

The ceremony of the installation of a poor Knight, was performed on Sunday last at Windsor, in St. George's church, during divine service in the afternoon; he was introduced in the usual manner, between two of the junior Knights; and being conducted to his hall, his patent of creation was delivered to him.

The name of this gentleman is Redman, by profession a fencing-master, and who taught his Majesty's father, as well as the present King to fence. The manner in which this poor old gentleman (for he is in the 85th year of his age) was brought to his present comfortable situation, ought not to be kept from public notice: His Majesty, who some years back, had settled upon him 100l. per annum, heard by accident he had been compelled to sell the annuity, and was a prisoner for debt in the King's Bench prison; directions were therefore given from the King to liberate him from his confinement; and his Majesty, out of his own privy purse, having paid his creditors, gave him the place of poor Knight, which will enable him to end the remaining few days of his life in peace and comfort.

May 1. There was a meeting at Mr. Pelham's on Sunday evening, when his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales stated to several country gentlemen, that as the Minister had insinuated that there was something in the correspondence between his royal father and himself which militated against the present application, it was necessary to his honor that it should be made known, and he authorised them to say, that he should be happy to have it submitted to Parliament.

A squadron for the East-Indies is said to be determined on, to consist of one ship of the line, a frigate, and two sloops of war. The East-India company are not, however, to contribute to the expence, it being a time of peace, and not done at any request of the directors.

At the commencement of the year, an American, bringing with him a considerable sum of money, but having no acquaintance whatsoever, arrived at Bourdeaux, and fixed his residence in a small hotel. Here he formed two connexions with whom he lived in confidential intimacy; the landlord and a friseur, the last of whom officiated as his occasional valet de chambre. To none but these and his Negro servant was he at all accessible; becoming at length more and more unguarded in the relation of his concerns and property in America, his two friends having corrupted the black slave, contrived a plan for making themselves the inheritors of his fortune. At the expiration of two months from his arrival, the American died suddenly in his bed; immediately afterwards, the landlord and the hair-dresser concealed, only for such a length of time as suited their purposes, the body of the deceased. One of these miscreants, disguising himself as much as possible, and putting on the appearance of a dying man, undressed himself, and entered into the sick bed, whilst the other, accompanied by the Negro, went in search of a notary to make the will of the supposed expiring testator. This ceremony having been concluded, the pious triumvirate sent for a father confessor to hear a catalogue of sins, to comfort a penitent in the last agonies, and to make him spotless by his hallowed absolution. Previous to the coming of this sacred visitor, the corpse was replaced in the bed, and then, with feigned tears, the three villains informed the minister, that death had made it too late for him to execute his devout purposes, and that the much lamented American was no more. The will was now read in form, and from this it appeared that the inn-keeper and the hair-dresser were the sole legatees. These having buried the American, began to administer; but too covetous of the wickedly-acquired spoil, they refused totally to fulfil their liberal promises of reward to the Negro: In consequence of which this irritated accomplice has betrayed them to the Magistrate. They are now under arrest, preparations are making for their trial, and the issue of it will doubtless prove fatal.

A large comet is expected to appear the latter end of the approaching summer, or the beginning of autumn; the approach of such bodies are much to be apprehended, for should they approximate too near the earth, in passing the line of its orbit towards the sun, dissolution of the system might be the inevitable consequence.——The planet Jupiter, which is above a thousand times larger than this terrestrial globe, was pushed or driven by violence from its usual course, in the Year 1680; and it is conjectured by the best astronomers that an universal deluge ensued in that great planetary body, and if peopled, the inhabitants totally destroyed.——Noah's Flood has been very justly imputed to a similar cause.

Each cone of the celebrated fortifications of Cherburgh, so much spoken of lately, stands the French government in the sum of 400,000 livres. The rock there is that from which king John threw down Prince Arthur his nepew; it is of prodigious height, and has a most precipitate descent: It is about half a mile from the fortifications, and at the top of it is a convent of friars, who quitted the fine valley below to be more retired, and to serve Heaven with a better grace.—The Chapel of Cherburgh was built by Matilda, the daughter of Henry I. This Princess being in a terrible storm at sea, said, "Should I ever, through Providence, reach the shore again, I will wherever be the spot, there build a Chapel." She accordingly built the above, and it has stood six centuries.

Extract of a letter from Paris, April 13.

"Versailles is in the greatest confusion; nobody is to be trusted; all the King's Ministers are disgraced.

"M. de Calonne, at nine o'clock on Sunday evening, received his dismission, and was requested by the King to remain at Versailles, to instruct his successor in his plans. This, you are to know, is an absolute order not to leave Versailles, where he is kept in sight. He has been impeached by the Marquis la Fayette.

"Mons. de Fourquier is named Comtrolleur de Finance, but only to fill up the gap—it is not supposed he can keep it long.

"Le Garde de Sceaux, M. de Meromesnil, is confined to his house.

"Le Comtrolleur des Batimens du Roi, Inspector of the King's buildings, M. d'Angerville, is dismissed, and the first President of the Parliament of Paris, M. d'Aligre, is desired to demand his conge; if he refuses, he will be instantly prosecuted for maladministration.—M. d'Ormesson is named to succeed him. These are the principal changes.

"M. le Marquis de Vaudreuil, brother to the Admiral of that name, a great favorite of the Queen, wanted the place of Comtrolleur des Batimens du Roi, but he is also in disgrace.

"It is said M. de Calonne is a defaulter for 150,000,000 livres—such are the facts and reports of the day.

"It is also reported, M. de Montmorin Ministre des Affaires Etrangeres, demanded of the King the dismission of M. de Calonne; but the true reason is surely this—it is from such authority as cannot be doubted:

"In the beginning of the Assemblée des Notables, the Comtrolleur-General des Finances, foreseeing from the spirit and vigour of the members, the affair would turn out badly for him, advised the King to sign five lettres des catchets, for as many of the heads; which he refused, by nobly saying, "They were called together to consult for his benefit, and they should debate in all freedom." Lately he had again the audacity to propose to his Majesty to dismiss the Garde de Seaux, and to sign 32 lettres des catchets for the different Notables, Archbishops, Bishops, &c. &c. It was this last application which decided the King, who most undoubtedly wishes to do what is right; but how is he to do it, from whom truth, right and justice, are always hidden? It is even said the King did not sign a lettre de catchet against Mirabeau, but that he was frighted out of the town by the Minister who was afraid his abilities would open the eyes of the King and people; for his Majesty replied, "No, he would not; that he had written the book with a good intention, and did not deserve punishment." These are noble sentiments, give me leave to tell you, from absolute power."

BERMUDA, April 14.

There is living in Tucker's-Town, a per[son] the name of Graisbury, upwards of 10[0] age, a carpenter by trade, and he is now [at] a large two sail boat himself. There is also [a] Burch, who lives at the same place, and is [said] be upwards of 100 years of age; there are [two] others nearly of that age, inhabitants of these [Islands] which proves, beyond all doubt, the healthi[ness] the climate; and were the male inhabitan[ts] obliged to go abroad for employ (numbers of [them] never return, and others lost at sea) these [Islands] would soon be overrun with the natives; [the] nearest calculation that can be made, there is [one] time in Bermuda, six females to one male.

NEWBERN, (N. C.) May 3[1]

On Tuesday morning last, we understood [that] lowing melancholy accident happened at Ocra[coke] Messrs. Joseph Pedrick, James Williams and [Dan]cis Williams, pilots, in company with three [others] observing two vessels at sea the evening before [put] off at day-break in the morning to pilot them [in] when they were about six miles from the bar, [their] boat was stove to pieces by a fish, supposed to [be a] Heronhog, by which means the above named per[sons] were drowned. The others were taken up by [Capt.] Morrison, in a sloop from St. Eustatia, who fortu[nate]ly happened to be coming in at that time—one [of] whom (Mr. Benjamin Gaskins) continues very [ill] he being nearly exhausted when taken up.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Berk[shire] County, dated June 20, 1787.

"Depredations on the property and person[s] those who unfortunately have been friends to gov[ern]ment in these counties are nightly committed. [We] have frequent instances of persons being violen[tly] attacked and beaten on the roads while they [are] journeying in a peaceable manner; in short, we [are] exposed to all the evils of a depredatory civil [war]. The insurgents plume themselves on having m[any] friends in the government—and indeed those [who] are opposed to them think they have every thing [to] fear.——God grant that their fears may not [be] realized."

PITTSBURGH, May 26.

A gentleman who arrived here the 19th inst[ant] from the mouth of Limestone, which place he l[eft] the first of May, informs us, that seven warrio[rs] the Shawanese nation had come in there, on the [28th] of April, with nine white people, to exchange [for] the same number of Indian prisoners, taken by Co[l.] Logan. The chief of these Savages (Capt. Wol[f]) gave the gentleman to understand, that go warr[iors] of the Cherokee nation were then out at war. Our informant adds, that as he came up the river, he [met] five bark canoes and three rafts cross below [the] mouth of Scioto, full of Indians.

At the Mingo Bottom, the gentleman saw a w[hite] man from Wheeling, by the name of Purdy, who informed him, that 14 of the inhabitants of that pla[ce] and the settlement adjoining, had been killed [or] taken by the Indians, a short time before, and that the rest of the settlers were then forted.

HUDSON, June 28.

We are informed that a few days since, John Brasee of the Manor of Livingston, had a large wen or incysted tumour, of the bigness of a goose-egg, c[ome] out of his forehead, right eye-brow and lid, which it covered. The operation was successfully per[for]med by Doctor Stoddard, who says what made it any way hazardous was the tumour's covering the orb of the eye and part of the temporal artery, both of which he avoided cutting though the adhesion was considerable. The wen, was of that sort of incysted tumours, called by writers on surgery, an atheroma, from the matter contained in the cyst[is] or bag, resembling and being of the consistence of a soft pudding. Brasee is now in the 41st year of his age, and was born with it on his eye-brow, it has been gradually increasing ever since, till it became painful and troublesome to him. He has been often deterred from having it extirpated, from a belief that it would be attended with sudden death, which many people asserted would be the case. He is in a fair way, and likely to do well.

NEW-YORK, July 5.

Yesterday afternoon arrived here, from Greenock, the ship Jenny, Thomas Logan, master, after a passage of eight weeks.

In the above vessel came passengers, Sir John Nisbet, Mr. John Baine, sen. and Mr. John Baine, jun. Letter-Founders from Edinburgh, who, we hear, intend to settle in this city, and about 40 more passengers.

As it is evident theſe Negroes were employed for this purpoſe, a diligent purſuit might probably lead to a diſcovery of the villains.

ALEXANDRIA, July 19.

A late London Paper mentions, that Dr. Herſchel, the celebrated Aſtronomer, has nearly completed his ſtupendous Teleſcope. It will be upwards of Forty Feet long, and Four Feet Nine Inches in diameter. Its Power, it is ſuppoſed, will exceed any inſtrument of the ſame Kind in the World. By the two Satellites of the Georgium Sidus lately announced, the ingenious Conſtructor believes, with the Help of his new Inſtrument, he ſhall be able to diſcover more Satellites of the ſame Planet. He has plainly perceived a Volcano in the Moon, and purſues his Reſearches with a Curioſity not more extended than indefatigable.

ALEXANDER SCOTT.

Weſtwood, Prince-William County, July 17, 1787.

THIS is to give notice that on the 19th of September laſt, came to me a Mulatto man, who told me his name was Robert Smith, and ſhewed me a paſs, which he deſired me to put my name to as I was a Juſtice of the Peace for Prince-William County, and told me he was going to Alexandria to ſee his brother. On examining him I was ſatisfied he was a runaway and had a forged paſs, and thought it my duty to take him up: Mr. Henry Dade Hooe was then at my houſe and going to Dumfries, who conſented to carry the fellow there together with his paſs and have him examined before ſome of the Juſtices of the Peace there; the fellow inſiſted he was a freeman and told me he had a horſe at Occoquan-Forge, about two miles from my houſe, and deſired the liberty of going by there for him; Mr. Henry Dade Hooe went with him and in the evening of the ſame day returned to my houſe, with a ſmall ROAN HORSE, about 4 feet 6 inches high, 10 years old, branded on the off ſhoulder and buttock thus [U]—I ſuppoſe the ſaid horſe to be of the value of five or ſix pounds; he was rough ſhod before, had a ſaddle and bridle about half-worn, the nails of the ſaddle appear to be waſhed with ſilver, alſo the bridle bit; the ſaddle had no ſtirrup-irons. The ſaid Henry Dade Hooe told me the fellow eſcaped from him at the forge.——He was taken again at Occoquan-Forge by one Mr. Crawford and brought before me on the Sunday night following, when he confeſſed he was a ſlave and belonged to a Mr. Ruſſell, and that his maſter had given him liberty to hire himſelf; the ſame night he eſcaped from ſaid Crawford at Occoquan-Forge.—A copy of this advertiſement I had put in the Virginia Gazette and no owner has appeared.—The horſe, ſaddle and bridle are now at my houſe near Occoquan Ferry.—The owner by proving property and paying charges may have them again.

POETRY.

The following elegant VERSES are taken from a Letter in the Collection of Letters written by the late Lord CHESTERFIELD to his Son.

WOULD you engage the lovely fair?
With gentleſt manners treat her;
With tender looks and graceful air,
In ſofteſt accents greet her.

Verſe were but vain; the Muſes fail,
Without the Graces aid;
The God of Verſe could not prevail
To ſtop the flying Maid.

Attention by attentions gain,
And merit care by cares;
So ſhall the Nymph reward your pain,
And Venus crown your pray'rs.

FORMERLY by advertiſement I requeſted all thoſe that were indebted to me to come and ſettle their accounts, but little regard was paid thereto.——I once more, and for the laſt time in this way, call upon every one that is indebted to me either by bond, bill, promiſſary note, open account, or otherwiſe to come and pay the ſame.—Likewiſe, all thoſe that I owe, or may think I do owe them, to bring in their accounts that they may be adjuſted and paid by myſelf in my life-time—for I am determined to have my accounts ſettled (if poſſible) and that ſpeedily, as I intend once more to croſs the Atlantic. By this method I mean to prevent accounts being trumped up againſt my eſtate after I am gone, that probably would never have appeared had I been on the ſpot, or alive.—For in the courſe of thirty odd years that I have been in buſineſs too many accounts of this deſcription have I ſeen.—There is on hand about a thouſand pounds firſt coſt of choice GOODS, that may be had on good terms.—Alſo, TWO LOTS, one of them improved on and both have lately been fenced in.—Alſo ſome NEGROES that I will either ſell or hire.

JOHN MUIR.

THIS County being long famous for SPRINGS of a medicinal quality, the good effects of which have been experienced by numbers from different parts, not only of this, but of the neighbouring States, that nothing might be wanting to promote the health of thoſe who may repair to this part of the country, the inhabitants of Staunton are erecting a commodious BATH, which will be fitted for their reception this enſuing ſummer.—The healthineſs of the ſituation, the good accommodation in the town, the conveniency and utility of the Bath, will, it is preſumed, be ſufficient motives to induce numbers of ladies and gentlemen to paſs the ſummer in ſaid place.
